Haarmann & Reimer VP named

Raymond E. Rossi, president of Haarmann & Reimer's flavor division, has announced the appointment of Anton Angelich as vice president, marketing, sweet goods flavors.

Angelich's new responsibilities include planning, new product line development and new market area expansion for the sweet goods flavors unit for North America.

The new Haarmann & Reimer VP has 25 years of food industry experience, including positions at Cultor Food Science (business director for flavors, beverage and dairy ingredients), Givaudan Roure (business director for sweet goods flavors) and Nestlé Foods (director of new product coordination).

Greenberg rejoins Union Confectionery

Union Confectionery Machinery Company has announced that James D. Greenberg has resumed his position as sales manager for the firm's confectionery, baking and snack food divisions.

Union is a fourth-generation family business which supplies used and rebuilt processing and packaging equipment for the food industry and was founded in 1912 by Greenberg's great-grandfather.

Mobil films now ExxonMobil

The films division of Mobil Chemical Company has become the films business of ExxonMobil Chemical Company.

ExxonMobil Chemical Company's portfolio of products and technology will be managed within four global business groups: basic chemical, polymers, intermediates and films.

ExxonMobil Chemical Company is a division of Exxon Mobil Corporation.

ExxonMobil's films business produces OPP flexible packaging films for the snack, bakery, confectionery and tobacco industries. The company operates seven film manufacturing facilities worldwide.

SIG takes over Demarex

SIG has taken over Demarex S.A. in Switzerland, retrospective to the end of 1999. Demarex, active in the field of robotic technology, has 38 employees who will be integrated into the SIG Pack Division.

Demarex manufactures parallel robots. In the future, the company will provide packaging systems and components for the chocolate and cookie industries.

The operative management of the company will remain in the hands of its previous owners, Dr. Marc-Olivier Demarex and Pascal Demarex.
